

MEDIA RELEASE

Drawn to the wild

Paintings of New Zealand Birds

NICOLAS DILLON

Published by Potton & Burton 09 November 2020, RRP: $59.99

Celebrated artist Grahame Sydney encourages wildlife painter to create book

Nicolas Dillon is one of Aotearoa New Zealand's leading wildlife painters. Having honed his craft and established an international reputation over some 30 years, Dillon's long-held dream was to publish a book and take his work to a wider audience.

Encouraged by Grahame Sydney and with a desire to share the story of his artistic process, Dillon created Drawn to the Wild: Paintings of New Zealand Birds. Here, we can appreciate Dillon's field work alongside his intricate studio paintings; by writing about and describing the experience of his practice, we share his world view.

Celebrated for his majestic portraits of our native birds – from terns and dotterels to ducks and kea, Dillon's exquisitely conceived drawings and painting demonstrate a sensitive, keen eye for the avian world. Growing up on a farm in Marlborough brought him into close contact with our wildlife; a bucolic childhood which strengthened his lifelong connection to the natural world.

Dillon's love of birds was sparked by a defining and dramatic moment when he was about four or five years old and a shining cuckoo thumped into the window and landed in the garden outside. Something stirred in him that day – the need for artistic expression; to capture the life force of birds – and has been with him ever since.

Motivated by a deep yearning to connect with something beyond what he sees and captivated by colour, form and tone, Dillon says, "Through birds, I come closest to the soul of the environment. By observing and painting the visible realities, I encounter the invisible and, for me, the distance between humans and nature is lessened."

Drawing in the field and spending hours observing birds lies at the heart of Dillon's practice. His reference material comes from working with a high-powered spotting scope and then, drawing and painting directly into a sketchbook. Those precious moments in nature are fundamental to his knowledge of birds and the environment and inspire not only his work but his life.

Drawn to the Wild is a remarkable tribute to our native birds and one which captures an artist in the moment, at the height of his powers.

Nicolas Dillon was just 18 years old when the first public exhibition of his work was held at Bealey Gallery in Christchurch. His career as an artist began when he left school in 1985 and he has had the good fortune to work full time as an artist ever since. Inspired by the work of Raymond Ching and Bruno Liljefors, he has exhibited at galleries and museums all over the world. Dillon now lives on the Wairau Plains outside Blenheim, with his wife and two children. For more, click here.

NICOLAS DILLON IS AVAILABLE FOR INTERVIEW / EXTRACTS & IMAGES ARE AVAILABLE ON REQUEST

Fairy tern TARA ITI

ast hurrhand down against the presailing own any, we tray tuntil, New Zewlands named hind. Glearring is, they add that closurs and forms a the appearage land shell on this was sandappt. Like perflow exists such hard out aims to be durse, our extrately shifting and. This is a hordwaye that changes by the hore as craw wait out the fish until they can exturn again to the stunn; I not the fish until they can be carn again to the stunn; I make age on the present again to the stunn; I make age on the present again to the stunn; I make age on the present again to the stunn; I make age on the present again to the stunn; I make age on the present again. necedors, but soon routine it is a faile idea, the flag in each up in every laing. I will have to read with II for incline and insuprice up while pitchess. I paintly sit, as were, whose after grainty expert illustrate and my to also systalize [see, 148] when again is the enceining with the fixer the levind part to. Numbering has the and both, the best if it thereven which is a simple continuous and open in some interest and and open in source with prediction and human authorise.

Bar-tailed godwit

they arrive from the meth cent, our of a looken only it with after of menzing and reach sight of them as they hartfer ownerses the multier and, out riging them the beach or their med arising the streets. Once me Rigings has still be debte, all off fitted jeventle, their just he half upgesprate their still be a still and their still be a st ring. The nasks show warner notes of burnt size in always on the lookout for smaller makes that be completely durk rafines. Feel very attached to these beautiful birds and I for them on their long journey north to breed in

MEDIA CONTACT: Sarah Thornton / Thornton Communications / sarah.thornton@prcomms.com / 021 753744